

THIS MUCH I KNOW FLACK STUDIO

est living Podcast

For our podcast series This Much I Know, design commentator Karen McCartney speaks to architects and designers at the peak of their careers, who've gleaned an enormous amount of knowledge and wisdom. Uncovering their practice, philosophy and approach to life in a space of their own design, the podcast explores what a home should feel like, as much as how it looks.

In this episode, McCartney sits down with Flack Studio founder and principal David Flack. From the designer's Fitzroy studio, which he calls "a giant 3D business card," Flack looks back at the inventive material approach he developed early on—one that remains as relevant as when he established the practice more than a decade ago. Now leading a holistic architecture and interiors studio, Flack's art-led, nonchalant attitude sees the practice traverse continents to design homes, hotels and hospitality spaces that aren't afraid to resist the expected.

SUPPORTING PARTNER

PODCAST EDITOR
JON TJHIA

PORTRAIT
MATTHEW MCQUIGGAN

